The Public Service Bridge Loan supports Columbia Law School JD students who have demonstrated a commitment to public service. The Public Service Bridge Loan assists with the financial challenges public interest students may face in registering for bar courses and covering post-graduate living expenses.

The Public Service Bridge Loan for up to a maximum of $10,000 in borrowing per participant for bar-related expenses is considered LRAP eligible debt. Qualifying LRAP employment is full-time work that makes direct use of a graduate's legal education in the public interest or public service sectors, or in legal services for the poor. Public Service Bridge Loan applicants will be required to provide documentation of an offer to work in LRAP qualifying employment (reviewed by the CLS Financial Aid Office), or, if unemployed, will apply with the intent to be employed in a full-time LRAP eligible paid position (as determined by SJI).

The following documents are required for the processing of a Public Service Bridge Loan:

- This Public Service Bridge Loan Request Form.
- A completed LRAP application.
- Employment documentation as described on the LRAP application.
- If the Public Service Bridge Loan request is approved, the central University requires the following items to be completed: a loan promissory note, TILA (Truth In Lending Act) documents, and an online entrance counseling form. The Financial Aid Office will contact approved borrowers by email with detailed instructions of this required information.
